

Politics of Exclusion and Return: The Phenomena of Diaspora Formations Budapest (Hungary)

There are two main understandings of the term 'diaspora' in migration politics. The first covers all forms of cultural minorities with similar traits, which have dispersed from their places of origin. The other understanding emphasises activities and loyalties in cultural minorities living outside their places of origin. These loyalties and interactions are understood as networks of social structures. This conference aims at achieving an understanding of diaspora formation. The central topics of debate will be trans-state politics, and the establishment of new interstate co-operation patterns concerning the management of migrants and diaspora politics.

Programme

Thursday

Introduction: The Phenomenon of Exclusion and Diaspora Formation
Evening Workshop: Gender Mainstreaming in Research and Politics of Migration: Changes of the role of refugee and migrant women in diaspora communities

Friday

Morning Seminar: Trans-State Politics and the Development of International Migrant and Refugee Management. Diaspora Politics in Portugal
Evening Workshop: The Comparative Method in Political Sciences

Saturday

Morning Seminar: Experiences in Inter-State Cooperation of Migrant Management
Evening Workshop: The Kurdish Diaspora in Germany

Sunday

Morning Seminar: Trans-State Politics and Social Research